In the Banks in the East are at times boavy losers by the accidents of commerce, it can not but be admitted that they often have only their own imprudence to thank for the losses which full upon them. In the recent case of REGINA versus HABORTA VES attention was called to the practice frequently resorted to by them of lending money upon goods. which they allow to be stowed in the godown of the person to whom the money has been advanced. A course such as this is so obviously imprudent that it is hardly conceivable that it can ever have been resorted to; and it may be hoped that the repeated warnings that have been given on the subject will at last end in its being abandoned. Another very similar custom, for which the Banks pre at all events in a measure, responsible, and whose permicious effects also became very prominently displayed in the Criminal Courts, has been noticed by the Bombay Chamber of Commerce in their last report. The practice in question is that of permitting shipmasters to sign bills of lading for large quantities of cotton long before it had been shipped, and making advances on the security of shipping documents without first satisfying themselves of the bona "fide character when he became a lover. This morning, he of the same. It was pointed out by the Chamber to shipmasters that by conniving at such a practice they involved their owners in serious risk, and exposed themselves to the danger of a criminal prosecution. Practices of a similar nature were reported to the Chamber in April, 1866, and an announcement of the same character was made by the Committee of Management, which was re- pore in May last, and paid a passage to ground for apprehension in the absence of ported at the time to have had a beneficial effect, but the Committee have nevertheless heard that this fraudulent is practice is making its appearance again, though they hope that the issue of a recent trial for fraud of this character may have the effect of preventing its recurrence. It is not by any means in victory for the shore going branch of the Bombay alone that this practice is resorted to. In China, during the Cotton excitement, it was very common, with respect to Cotton Mr. Jollye took charge of them, when the score shipments, and at present the same course of action is at times resorted to with respect to other produce. Of course the Banks cannot the bowling. Major Sattle, 75th, proved an actually be charged with imprudence in any given case; as, as a rule, they would be able ham showed bimself to be a steady but. to make it difficult to show that they were aware that the transaction was in any way other than perfectly bona fide. But it is or. dinarily quite within their power by asking a few questions to satisfy themselves as to the rights and wrongs of the matter, and an easy going neglect of such a precaution, though it may be sufficient to clear them of responsibility to the Head Offices, is not really all that prudence and foresight demand. It is never safe, and strictly speaking it may be said never to be right to do anything upon a basis that is not in fact what it is in appearance. If a Bank receives a Bill of Lading for goods about to be shipped, and ad-ances money upon it, as though the goods actually were shipped, it is simply lending its money up to the time of shipment upon nothing whatever. It would be far better to obtain an undertaking from the parties requiring the advance that within such and such a time the necessary security would be forthcoming, as in that case, supposing anything went wrong, the Bank would in reality stand in no worse position than under the arrangement objected to, and would not have given any countenance to so questionable a practice as that of signing bills of lading for goods before the merchandise they represent had been received on board. In a general way, all such arrangements, although they may be entered upon with perfectly fair intentions are to be objected to as calculated to lead to the deception of third parties, and as being, whether bona fide or not, legally fraudulent. A man is supposed to consider the impression which his acts will convey to others as woll as the nature of the acts themselves. Care and vigilance on the part of the Banks would no doubt be quite sufficient to put an end in toto to the practice which the Bombay Chamber of Commerce justly complains of No shipmaster would run the risk of signing Bills by a banker, he might hold him responsible proceedings, it is certain that they will be frequently resorted to without their know-

Mr. Wade has replied to the enquiry by the Tientsin people, as to their prospects for the winter, that he relies on the gamboats which will remain here, to preserve quiet, and would stay, if the case were his. I need hardly say that the execution. under these circumstances, tends to increase punishment is done away with, and the men are elevated into heroes and martyrs.

Mr. Wade is said not to regard this settle ment of affairs as a satisfactory guarantee for the future. He is still believed not to attach no grave political significance to the massiere as the anjority of people do; but be dock nee interference with the rioters, and in the delry in punishing them; and I believe his remonatrances with the Taung-li Yamen have bad quite as much effect as those of Mr. de Rochechouert, in bringing the Chinese to the quasiarrangement they have now decided on. The cause for regret is, that, he will not requenise the premeditation and political influence which brought about the riot. In the absence of a more explicit declaration, the letter which I enclose from Mr. Lay to the Chairman of the Tientsin Municipal Council, conveying Mr. Wade's reply to an enquiry regarding the prospects for the winter, wil give some clue to his opinion.

It is very difficult to predict of the coming winter. The gight gunbouts spoken of as likely to remain here during the winter-four French two English, one Russian, and one Americanboat embedded in ice is a less effective battery than a gunboat able to mancover at will; and anable to fire into a mob. if one were to assemble. short of murder. Still, some at least of their gans would be got large numbers of troops are sesembled in this disguised province, and the demember of the Tientain people towards foreigners is hostile and incolent. A few foreigners have gone into the city, but they have felt much mo ecomfortable on their return. In one case a man was pearly hustled off his pony, and his native attendant was actually pulled off, and maltreated. In another, a foreigner went in with his wife, she riding in a chair. The chair coolies would only curry the chair on condition that it should be bermetically closed; but the foreigner, who was walking, chancing to meet a military mandarin riding, was abusively told to stand uside and let his betters pass. The bearing of the people generally is threatening and they bestow on intruders the choicest of the abusive epithets in which the Chinese language is rich. The order to aproot the millet stulks is said by the natives to have been obeyed, along the line of country between this and Pelcing.

The wonders of the Chassepote at Mentana were simply a myth of de Failly the baroc wrought by the Mitmilleuse at Saarbruck only un ingenious invention of Frossard. I stands survivalled. All the new words which the Chinese bave of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects Both the Court and Panti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a yast cooncary of space, schieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. do. The scope of the work is so great, and its utilitarian purposes so complete, that a re-ference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chiplains subjects fully, with which very few in-deed of them are perfectly dequainted.
